Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136 (a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If the period for reply specified above is less than thirty (30) days, a reply within the statutory minimum of thirty (30) days will be considered timely.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133).
- Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

Status

Art Unit: 2854

The listing of references in the specification is not a proper information disclosure statement. 37 CFR 1.98(b) requires a list of all patents, publications, or other information submitted for consideration by the Office, and MPEP § 609 A(1) states, "the list may not be incorporated into the specification but must be submitted in a separate paper." Therefore, unless the references have been cited by the examiner on form PTO-892, they have not been considered.

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless --

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1-4,6,7 and 9-13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Koch et al. (US 6,092,466).

Koch et al. teaches a process and a device for determining cutting positions of webs that meet the process and structure as broadly recited. Koch et al. teaches the process for determining cutting positions of a plurality of webs 9-11 including the steps of recording a measured value for a cutting position (Koch et al., col.3 lines 59-61) by measuring sensors 13 and using the recorded measured value to determine the cutting position of the webs (Koch et al., col.3 lines 62-66).

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 2854

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 5 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103 (a) as being unpatentable over Koch et al. (US 6,092,466).

Koch et al. teaches a process and a device for determining cutting positions of webs having substantially the process and the structure as broadly claimed. Koch et al. fails to teach clearly that the value of the cutting positions of the webs can be set by hand, and the sensors used are an optical scanner. However, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to entering a desired value by hand for the desired cutting position, and use a measured value as a reference value in the step of determining the cutting position of the webs since this step that performs at the time of the start-up is obvious and necessary to optimum operating of the device. Additionally, the use of an optical scanner for detecting a printed pattern is well known in the art.

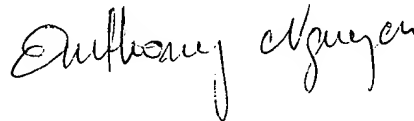

The patents to Matsumoto et al., Goldberg et al., and Okamura are cited to show other structures and methods having obvious similarities to the claimed structure and method.
